Celtiberians believe in a single, all-powerful God or Goddess, who is known by many names, including Lugh, Brigid, and Dagda. They also believe in a number of other gods and goddesses, including the Morrigan, Cernunnos, and Arawn.

Celtiberians practice a variety of rituals and ceremonies, including seasonal festivals, moon rituals, and healing ceremonies. They also practice divination, using tools such as the Ogham alphabet and the tarot.

Celtiberianism is a nature-based religion, and Celtiberians have a deep respect for the natural world. They believe that the Earth is a sacred place, and that all living things are interconnected.

The History of Celtiberianism

The Celts and Iberians were two of the most powerful and influential cultures in Europe during the Iron Age. They shared many similarities in their beliefs and practices, including a belief in a single, all-powerful God or Goddess, a reverence for nature, and a practice of divination.

In the early centuries of the Common Era, the Celts and Iberians were conquered by the Romans. Their cultures were suppressed, and their beliefs and practices were driven underground.

However, in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, there was a revival of interest in Celtic and Iberian culture. This revival was led by scholars and artists such as William Butler Yeats, Lady Gregory, and J.R.R. Tolkien.

This revival of interest in Celtic and Iberian culture led to the development of a number of new Pagan religions, including Celtiberianism.

Celtiberianism was founded in the early 21st century by a group of Pagans who were inspired by the ancient Celts and Iberians.

The Beliefs of Celtiberianism

Celtiberianism is a polytheistic religion, and Celtiberians believe in a number of gods and goddesses. The most important of these gods is Lugh, who is the god of the sun, light, and healing. Other important gods include

Brigid, the goddess of fire, hearth, and poetry; Dagda, the god of agriculture, fertility, and wisdom; and the Morrigan, the goddess of war, death, and fate.

Celtiberians also believe in a number of other supernatural beings, including fairies, elves, and spirits. They believe that these beings live in the natural world, and that they can interact with humans.

Celtiberians believe that the Earth is a sacred place, and that all living things are interconnected. They believe that humans have a responsibility to protect the Earth and all its inhabitants.

The Practices of Celtiberianism

Seasonal festivals are one of the most important aspects of Celtiberianism. These festivals celebrate the changing of the seasons, and they are a time for Celtiberians to come together and give thanks for the Earth's bounty.

Moon rituals are another important part of Celtiberianism. These rituals are held on the full moon, and they are a time for Celtiberians to connect with the divine feminine.

Healing ceremonies are also an important part of Celtiberianism. These ceremonies are used to heal physical, emotional, and spiritual illnesses.

Divination is another important practice in Celtiberianism. Celtiberians use a variety of tools to divine the future, including the Ogham alphabet and the tarot.

The Growth of Celtiberianism

Celtiberianism is a growing religion, and it is attracting a wide range of people. Some people are drawn to Celtiberianism because of its ancient roots, while others are drawn to its nature-based spirituality.

Celtiberianism is a welcoming religion, and it is open to people of all backgrounds. If you are interested in learning more about Celtiberianism, there are a number of resources available online. You can also find Celtiberian groups in many cities and towns around the world.
