Taqiya became more widespread during the Umayyad dynasty. The Umayyads were a Sunni dynasty that persecuted Shias. As a result, many Shias began to practice taqiya in Free Download to protect themselves from persecution.

Taqiya continued to be practiced by Shias throughout the centuries. It was especially common during times of persecution. For example, during the Safavid dynasty, Shias were forced to practice taqiya in Free Download to avoid execution.

Practice of Taqiya

Taqiya is the practice of deceiving non-Muslims in Free Download to protect oneself or the faith. This can be done in a variety of ways, such as lying, concealing one's beliefs, or pretending to be something that one is not.

There are a number of reasons why a Shia might practice taqiya. One reason is to avoid persecution. Shias have been persecuted throughout history, and taqiya has been a way for them to protect themselves. Another reason for practicing taqiya is to protect the faith. Shias believe that their faith is true, and they do not want to see it corrupted by non-Muslims.

Controversy Surrounding Taqiya

Taqiya is a controversial doctrine. Some Muslims believe that it is permissible, while others believe that it is forbidden.

Those who believe that taqiya is permissible argue that it is a necessary way to protect oneself and the faith. They point out that Shias have been persecuted throughout history, and taqiya has been a way for them to survive. They also argue that taqiya is not lying, but rather a form of self-defense.

Those who believe that taqiya is forbidden argue that it is a form of deception. They believe that Muslims should always be truthful, and that taqiya is a violation of this principle. They also argue that taqiya can be used to justify violence and other forms of extremism.

The debate over taqiya is likely to continue for many years to come. It is a complex issue with no easy answers.
