Unraveling And Reweaving Sacred Canon In Africana Womanhood

Feminist Studies is a groundbreaking work that challenges and expands the traditional understanding of the sacred canon in Africana womanhood feminist studies. Drawing on a wide range of disciplines, including womanist theology, gender studies, and Black women's studies, this book presents a nuanced and intersectional analysis of how the sacred canon has been used to both empower and oppress Black women.

Through careful examination of historical and contemporary texts, the author argues that the sacred canon has often been used to silence and marginalize Black women's voices. However, she also shows how Black women have consistently resisted and reimagined the sacred canon, creating their own unique and powerful expressions of spirituality and liberation.

This book is an essential resource for scholars and students in Africana women's studies, gender studies, and religion. It is also a valuable resource for anyone interested in the intersection of race, gender, and religion.
